AN EXHIBITION ON "New Deal Arts in San Francisco" had its opening at the Labor Archives and Research Center, San Francisco State University, on October 14th. Featuring photographs and ephemera of some of the best known PWAP and WPA projects in San Francisco, the exhibit will be on display through December, 1986, to be followed by a special traveling exhibit on the International Workers of the World. The Labor Archives and Research Center is located at 480 Winston Drive, between the Stonestown shopping mall and Lake Merced. It is open Monday through Friday, 1-5 p.m. and by appointment (call 415-564-4010).

THE ASSOCIATION FOR THE BIBLIOGRAPHY OF HISTORY wishes to remind historical bibliographers of the National Registry for the Bibliography of History, an on-going listing of bibliographical projects in all fields of history. The Registry is published annually in American History: A Bibliographical Review in which the completion and publication of a bibliography is also noted. Compilers of bibliographies are urged to register their work in progress. For information and registration forms write to the Director, Thomas T. Helde,

A CALL FOR PAPERS has been issued by the Pacific Coast Conference on British Studies for its annual meeting, to be held at Stanford University on March 27-8, 1987. Proposals may be for an individual paper or for a panel of two (preferred) or three papers. Each session occupies an hour and forty-five minutes, of which about forty-five minutes are devoted to introduction, commentary and discussion. Papers and panels are invited on virtually all aspects of the British experience, especially history, literature and the arts. Visual and sound presentations are encouraged. Proposals should be about one double-spaced typed page in length. They should summarize the argument of the paper and its basis in research. Those proposing panels should feel free to suggest a moderator and a commentator. Send proposals by November 26 to: Barbara Shapiro, Department of Rhetoric, University of California, Berkeley, CA 94720.

A CONFERENCE ON THE CALIFORNIA WOMAN SUFFRAGE MOVEMENT, sponsored jointly by The Institute for Historical Study and the California History Center, will be held on Saturday, November 15 from 1-3:30 p.m. at the California History Center, Trianon Building, on the De Anza College Campus, 21250 Stevens Creek Blvd., in Cupertino (Santa Clara County). The conference, held in conjunction with the exhibition, "California Woman Suffrage," features three presentations. Jane Boyd, of the Women's Studies Program at San Jose State University, will speak on "The Bullet and the Ballot." Annegret Ogden, Associate Librarian at the Bancroft Library and an Institute member, will speak on " The Home and the Vote: The California Housewife Tries to Mix and Match." Rosemary Broghan, of Cabrillo College, will speak on "Santa Cruz County and Women's Suffrage: East Coast Ideas Come West." Following these presentations, the exhibition will be open to view with a wine and cheese reception.
